THIS IS UNEVALUATED INFORMATION

1. The radio station (short wave station) was located on a ridge about two miles west of KRASNOYE SELO (30°6' E/59°44' N).
2. The transmitting station proper was a two-story brick building built in the shape of a T (see Annex).
3. The antennae were suspended from about 300 masts, each about 10 feet high. Wires fitted on spiked rims of up to 3.3 feet in diameter were observed between the masts.
4. The framework of three barracks buildings located about 3,300 feet south of the radio station was completed. They were four-story, red brick structures, about 100x330 feet. A boiler house and another building with kitchen and mess hall were also available. The barracks buildings and the radio station were connected by a newly constructed asphalt road, about 3,300x16½ feet. Three pumping stations, providing the installation with water, were located east of the road.
5. The radio station was built under the supervision of MVD officers.
